Janesville in Race for Big Hospital to Be Built West

Serious Effort to Have Government Locate One of the New Institutions for Disabled Soldiers Here.

Janesville, which played a conspicuous part in the World War, is not forgetting the ex-service man, especially those who were wounded and still suffer the effects of shot, shell or disease. Through the Chamber of Commerce, this city is making a strong bid to have one of the five proposed government hospitals for the care and cure of wounded soldiers located within the boundaries of the city. These efforts will not be halted until the government makes its final decision as to where these institutions shall be placed.

One of the last acts of Woodrow Wilson before going out of the presidential chair on March 4 was to sign the Sunday Civil bill providing for an appropriation of $18,000,000 for soldiers' hospitals in five districts of the United States.

This gives $3,600,000 for each institution. Each building will cost approximately $2,500,000 for construction and equipment; the other $1,100,000 to be used for operation during the first year. In the original form, the Sunday Civil bill came from the house of representatives as the Langley bill and provided for five regional hospitals, one in the Great Lakes district. The Senate lacked a rider on the Sunday Civil bill providing for five hospitals, leaving their location an open question.

One of the hospitals, it has been decided, is to be located in the Great Lakes district, though not necessarily along the lake front. It is this one that Janesville seeks to be placed here. But, as four other cities are contending with that want the institution, also, Racine, Oshkosh, Waukegan, and Milwaukee. It has also to compete with the hands that the Speedway hospital in Chicago, which is a first-class hospital in the world may influence the decision of any committee on selection. Besides the public health service, working in conjunction with the army, has been transporting patients to or from the facilities available at Fort Sheridan, although of a temporary character.

Present Arguments for City. Along with the other municipalities wanting the hospital, Janesville has been requested to present definite data on the locations available here with arguments as to their desirability. This information will be placed in the hands of Edwin J. Barrett, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of the bureau of war risk insurance in Chicago. Health service, under whose direction the proposition will be decided. Mr. LaPorte has been reappointed by President Harding to this position. The board will pass upon each location submitted and make an unbiased report of their desirability.

Started by Chamber of Commerce. The efforts of the local chamber were started by a letter from the main on February 15 when he wrote to Senator L. L. Boonrock and Congressman Randall declaring that Janesville is an excellent location because it is situated in the most beautiful part of Southern Wisconsin, is surrounded by the state's richest agricultural community and has direct transportation lines to the east and west.

HAMON'S WIDOW CALLED TO STAND, CLARA TO TESTIFY

WIFE OF DEAD MILLIONAIRE TOO NERVOUS TO TALK IN MORNING. COURT CROWDED

Spectators' View in Finding Seats, Bring Lunch, Stay All Day

Armore, Okla.—Mrs. Clara L. Hamon, widow of the Oklahoma millionaire oil and railroad man and prominent republican politician, took the stand Monday afternoon in the trial of Clara Smith Hamon, charged with the shooting of Hamon at an Armore hotel last November.

Mrs. Hamon, who appeared thoroughly composed, took the stand at 1:40. She had appeared too nervous to testify at the morning session. Mrs. Hamon spoke in a well modulated voice and answered questions quickly and decisively. She said she on one occasion came to Armore and went to Hamon's and Clara's rooms at the hotel there.

Clara Hamon watched the witness closely as she testified, but otherwise seemed unaffected.

Mrs. Hamon said on one occasion when she brought her daughter, Olive Belle, 11 years old, from Chicago to play her violin at an entertainment she talked with her husband and later went to the room of Hamon and Clara occupied. She said Clara came in and threw her hat and gloves on the bed and ran out. Mrs. Hamon said she took a plate from Clara's room on the occasion.

Mrs. Hamon said she saw her husband in Chicago from time to time. She said on her visit here for Olive Belle to play, she saw her husband and took her to the depot and put her on a train for Chicago an hour and a half after she had seen Clara in Hamon's room.

The state then rested its case.

Clara Hamon will be the last defendant witness to take the stand, her counsel said Monday. W. P. McGinn, of the defense, said there was a disclaimer of numbers made by the defendant on the stand and that the five members of her corps of attorneys voted unanimously to have her testify.

The defense counsel indicated its first witness would be the next port, at the hotel where Hamon was shot.

Although court was officially adjourned, the announcement had little effect on the spectators. Practically all of those who had seated themselves during the noon hour while others milled around the aisles and along the wall, endeavoring to get a new point of vantage, lunch launches in glass numbers made their appearance today. Spectators standing devouring their food and over alert to the first sent mail vacant through persons leaving the court room.

Several persons slyly slipped the transoms over the entrance to the court a little lower, permitting them with the aid of a ladder to climb a slight view of the court room.

Frank L. Ketch, formerly business manager for Jake L. Hamon and now administrator for his estate, went on with President Harding.

MELLON WORKS ON
TARIFF PROGRAMStop-Gap Emergency Measure
May Be Given Precedence
Over Revenue.

[By Associated Press.]

Washington.—Formulation of a definite program for tariff and internal revenue legislation, contemplated by republican members of the senate finance committee and the house ways and means committee Monday on meeting with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to draft detailed recommendations to be submitted to President Harding.

Whether enactment of a stop gap emergency tariff measure should be given precedence over revenue legislation was one of the questions to be decided. The drift of sentiment appears to favor an attempt to put through as speedily as possible after convening congress in April, a new emergency tariff measure for the protection of agricultural interests.

Senator Penrose, chairman of the finance committee, has expressed the opinion that such a measure could be passed in a short time if more closely limited in its schedules than was the Fordney bill vetoed by former President Wilson.

KEEP CHICKENS AT

Lurid Movie
Posters Scored
by Fondy Pastors

Attack was made on indecent motion picture posters by Rev. Robert Gordon, pastor of the First Baptist church of Fond du Lac, in his sermon during the union Lenten services in the Congregational church last night.

During the morning services of the church it was voted to take a collection for Chinese relief.

To "shilly-shally," to shuffle and shake off responsibility is to open war on the Grace of God," according to Rev. Mr. Gordon. "Never was there an hour when there was more need that someone be stirred up. I am not a standpatter, but I do believe that what we most need today is to be stirred up to recall and reconsider the things that we learned at the knees of our mothers."

"Reaction from the fearful strain and lawlessness of war has resulted in a moral slump that from every sea is today sweeping across America. Back of the overturning of police force in Milwaukee, Chicago and elsewhere is the fact that decent citizens have been goaded beyond endurance by crime and immorality. Why the widespread vitriolic criticism of theatrical exhibitions and shows?"

Last night on my way to this church I saw a group of boys gathered about a set of posters in front of a theater—that spectacle stirred me to unutterable indignation. Those bathing-beach pictures are an affront to decency and ought to be removed by every good citizen. We may not find it so easy to control what goes on inside those doors, but surely we have a right to insist that the children on the public streets shall not be menaced by calculated lechery," said Rev. Mr. Gordon.

Drawing of a jury to try the state case against Rinle Herdendorf, charged with the kidnapping and detention of a minor child, occupied the attention of the circuit court Monday afternoon. The jury reported at 1:30 o'clock.

The Herdendorf trial will conclude this morning's cases on the present court calendar.

The defendant in the pending action is charged with taking a 14-year-old girl from Janesville to a home of a relative, where she remained for several days. District attorney S. G. Dunwiddie will prosecute the case.

COOLIDGE SITS IN CABINET MEETINGS

Secretaries Still Timid About Their Jobs—Vice-President's Position.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
Washington, D. C.—President Harding's first week in the White House has been a struggle against the limitations of a twenty-four hour day and the irrefragable energy of an army of office workers.

Mr. Harding has made a pleasing impression upon everybody who has called on him—an impression of earnestness, and conscientious application to duty. The cabinet officers have interfered to some extent with the orderly procedure of the White House by breaking in on regular engagement hours to seek the advice and guidance of the chief executive.

This will not continue, however, as the ten heads of departments will gradually become accustomed to their surroundings and will soon go ahead on their own responsibility.

Timid at first, the cabinet secretaries have been reticent to express themselves so much because of timidity as unfamiliarity with the business they found on hand when they took office. There has been a great deal of the usual amount of stage fright as hundreds of newspaper reporters have bombarded new officials with a thousand and one questions, the great majority of which couldn't be answered as yet.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.
Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young married man of 21. I have been married seven months to a young widow who has a girl aged three.

My folks didn't want me to marry, but I did anyway. We have been living in furnished rooms until I could earn enough to go housekeeping. There is a man of 40, a widower, who has been causing trouble between us.

Ever since my wife quit working for him he has caused trouble. I have several letters which he wrote to her trying to coax her to come to his home and stay. My wife realizes I cannot give her the home and clothes she would like to have, for I do not earn enough. Please tell me what I can do about it.

FRECKLES.
I would suggest that you secure a position in another town and take your wife there. Of course you could lose her former employer, but it would take a good deal of money and he might have power enough to defeat you. Right now is a bad time to change positions. If you love your wife, however, it would be better to live with her on a farm than to have her lured away by a disreputable man. I hope she realizes that a lot of love means more than riches.

ALONE.
I have printed your letter because you say you know from experience how much kindness means to the outcast. All of us help daily in the making and breaking of character. When we fail to reach out a helping hand, we are the outcast is sinning, and just as greatly, although maybe in a different way.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 17 years old and am considered pretty. I have been going with two young men 21 years of age. The one boy is very jealous. I went out with him one night and he wanted to make a date for the following Saturday. I had a date with the other boy and so I refused. He was very angry. He threw an angry remark at me and made fun of me to my face. When he left he said he would call me up, but I said I wasn't necessary as I would not see him again.

Did I do right in refusing to talk to him or go out with him again? He had asked me for steady company, which I refused. I am very nervous. I choose, haven't I? KITTIE.

Since the young man was insulting, he deserves to be dropped. Probably he would not see him again. I am very nervous. I choose, haven't I? KITTIE.

Yes, you are free to go with whomever you choose.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: You will be rewarded for your answer to "I. L. Yes, what would our Jesus have done to this fallen girl but picked her up and been a friend to her? It is by good company and good influences that girls are made better.

I was left alone in this world and I know what kind words and sympathy have done for me, and also know what "knocks" have done. I bless God for the people who have

Advertising Essential for Farmers

(By Gazette Correspondent.)

Madison—Advertising is essential to the success of the farmer's cooperative organization. Edward Nordman, director of the Wisconsin divisions of markets, declares in an official statement issued by the Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Station, that the farmer's product is as necessary as sufficient to the consumer.

"The consumer's demand is of fundamental importance to any market organization," the statement points out. "The right kind of advertising based on quality and standard stimulates demand for a product, but it will bring the desired results only when this demand is backed by the purchasing power of the consumer."

Mr. Nordman believes that the failure of many farmers' cooperative enterprises has resulted because of the unstable economic conditions. He believes that "an economic system under which the productive forces are allowed to be idle part of the time, resulting in long periods of unemployment, in long periods of unemployment, in long periods of unemployment."

"A farmers' selling agency," he said, "can only thrive in a proper environment when the productive forces of the country are fully utilized. A continual and increasing power of the consumer is to be desired, in his opinion, and can only be realized when there is regular employment and elimination of waste in distribution."

TOWN OF JANSVILLE

Like Department Head.
While very little was said about the part the vice president played in the cabinet meeting, it was later officially announced that he was seen at the meeting in exactly the same way as if he were the head of a government department. Vice President Sherman sat with the cabinet for a while, but the speech was soon dropped because of the relation of the vice president to the senate, over which he sits as a presiding officer and in which body he is privileged to cast a vote in the event of a tie.

The Letters of Tessie and Joe

DEAR JOE:

Say Joe isn't it the limit what women will be up to next? I've been reading in the papers how in some of the old ruined cities of Europe, such as London and Paris, the women have taken to smoking pipes just like the men, only smaller and more feminine looking pipes of course, with silver and jewels set on them to disguise their real meaning. And it seems the women in this country are going to take up the fad out of pure imitation because they think whatever is worth doing in London and Paris is worth doing well. Just because it's London and Paris, if you know what I mean.

Mrs. Pink and I were discussing the pro's and con's of the subject, and we both agreed that any lady who even thinks of smoking a pipe might be a lady in name but not in actions. If she wants to smoke cigarettes just to be broad minded, that's her business, but a pipe is another horse of a different color. As Mrs. Pink said, it's undignified, and I got a couple of your old pipes and we filled them and started to smoke them just to prove been seen in exactly the same way as if he were the head of a government department. Vice President Sherman sat with the cabinet for a while, but the speech was soon dropped because of the relation of the vice president to the senate, over which he sits as a presiding officer and in which body he is privileged to cast a vote in the event of a tie.

Well, outside of that, I've never been in better health, and so far neither has the baby. I add so far because this morning I think the Finnish maid, who eats while she's walking to and fro as well as most other times, happened to lay an unfinished half of a doughnut in his crib while she went to answer the doorbell, and when she came back the doughnut had disappeared as completely as the day it was born, and from certain signs on the baby's face there was only one explanation, and that was it. But so far, as I said, he's still in the prime of health. He's a wonderful child, Joe, if I say so myself. If he can do that without a tooth in his head what will he do when he's in possession of all his faculties? Lovingly,

TESSIE.

ALL TANGLED UP IN MARRIAGE BONDS

Cupid in a Mix-Up Over Snake Charmer's Marriage License.

Cupid got all muddled up in two cases which started in Beloit and may end in the courts on a charge of matrimony. Municipal Judge John B. Clark, Beloit, granted an application for marriage to Phillip De Georgia, 1180 South Main street, Rockford, and Ethel Hilton, Beloit, last Saturday.

Investigation by the Rockford police shows that Miss Hilton, a willow, clinging type of a young woman with considerable dashing beauty, is already married and her husband is a patient in a Rockford hospital. He is Ferdinand Johnson.

Ethel Hilton came in her marriage application, that she was single and a "housewife." When questioned in Rockford and Beloit it developed that she is a "snake-charmer" at times and at other times considerable of a vampire. She sought to wed De Georgia through Judge Clarke, who became suspicious and after filing their application, today requested that it be returned.

On February 24 there was an application filed in Janesville for Vincenzo Sausa, 114 South Fifth street, Rockford, and Grossin Reed, 500 South Halsted street, Chicago. According to the Rockford police, Reed was already married to Fred Romano, Rockford, Illinois.

Because of the police investigation it is unlikely that the wedding bells will ring in either case. The officers told the two young women they had to be satisfied with their present husbands or take steps to get rid of them legally, before using their applications obtained from Judge Clark.

Reed alleged her marriage to Tony Angelo was a "fake ceremony," but the police probe showed that they were married in Oglesby, Ill., by a man named John. Therefore the marriage was held legal. The dead woman was brought into the police light following charges of her living with William Banks, a military "M. E." officer.

After warning the two women against trying to use their Wisconsin marriage licenses, the Rockford police now want to know what to do with "Pete" a huge snake pet of Miss Hilton alias Mrs. Johannessen, which is being held in the Rockford police station.

CITY CLERK'S JOB TO BE CONTESTED

A contest for the office of city clerk, which was announced Monday by Percy Hall, machinist's helper at the C. & N. W. shop here, that he will be a candidate at the election, April 6, Ervin J. Sackell, however, has just announced his candidacy for the office several weeks ago.

Hall graduated from a business course in Janesville high school in 1918. He was prominent in school athletics and other activities. He lives at 314 Center street.

That the Fourth ward aldermanic contest will be between only two men—J. J. Hill, present alderman, and J. J. Sholdan, ex-councilman—appears certain with the withdrawal of George Quade Monday. "I am grateful for the encouragement given me by Fourth ward citizens, but won't make the run this year."

HAMON'S WIDOW CALLED ON STAND

the witness stand Monday morning over objection of the assistant county clerk, J. L. Hodge, who announced that developments Saturday were such as to indicate that Ketch would be charged as an accessory after the fact of Hamon's murder.

Ketch testified that under Juke Hamon's instructions he had drawn $5,000 from his personal account and on it to Clara Hamon on the day following Hamon's shooting in the hotel suite he occupied with the young woman and had told her to leave Antigo and go to Chicago.

Ketch said on the witness stand that Hamon at first told him that he had shot himself accidentally, and in a moment afterward that statement would come to light as a hoax as they heard of the affair.

Ketch was suspicious. "I don't know," Ketch said when he first heard of Hamon when he arrived at the hospital to which Hamon had walked after he was shot.

"I did it myself," Ketch said Hamon replied.

"Don't tell me that," Ketch said he replied to Hamon.

He then charged that Clara Hamon shot him in the darkness of his room as he lay on his bed. Ketch continued to insist that Hamon said:

"I want it given out that I did it myself and give Clara some money and have her get away. My wife will be here as soon as she hears of this and I want Clara to go. Tell the world any kind of a story; that I dropped the gun; anything."

Interested in Business.

Mr. Ketch testified that Clara Hamon is still interested in several business projects both with the Hamon estate and with him personally, among them being a picture show at Rockford.

She has drawn $125 as a dividend on some oil property jointly owned with the Hamon estate since the shooting. Ketch testified that the remainder of the money that has accrued to her interest has been collected against drilling expenses on other interests, he said.

Ketch outlined Clara's property as $120,000 interest in an oil lease, 5-75 interest in another lease; a good paying piece of property "worth two for one" and from which her income has been as high as $500 to $600 a month.

He said she has a $5,000 worth of stock in another oil company and the picture show stock.

EXPERT COMPLETES LOCAL GAS SURVEY

Gifford to Announce Analysis in Few Days in Rate Reduction Move.

Bern T. Gifford, gas expert, has completed a three-day survey of the gas situation in Janesville and has returned to Madison where he will go over data furnished by the New Gas Light company to the railroad commission. He has promised to send a complete report of his findings to City Attorney Roger C. Cunningham within the next few days.

Upon the results of the survey, the city is expected to apply to the railroad commission for a reduction in gas rates here upon which there have been many complaints.

Mayor T. E. Walsh and the city attorney engaged Mr. Gifford for a survey when in Madison several days ago. Their action was confined by the council last Monday night, several of the councilmen having already protested against present gas rates at a meeting three weeks ago.

Supt. J. F. Wontenky of the gas plant gave Mr. Gifford full access to the company's books, as he had promised to city officials.

The Head of a Family Should Know These Things

A MAN owes it to his family to know enough about the laws of property descent to make proper provision for his family's future.

First—he should know what will happen if he leaves no will. He should know what will become of his real property and his personal property. He should know what distribution the law would make as between his wife and children. He should know what the law prescribes about the appointment of an administrator. He should know about administrator's bonds, and what they might cost his estate.

Second—he should know what distribution of his property he can direct by making a will. He should know that he can appoint his own executor and trustee, and what this may mean in the safeguarding and economical management of his estate.

We have for distribution a booklet, entitled "Safeguarding Your Family's Future" which discusses this subject. Call or write for a copy and then consult with your lawyer as to what action you should take to insure your own family's future welfare.

Silently, without lifting their eyes from their victim for an instant, the two men moved apart to take him on both sides. He clung to the wall, forcing from the front attack. The laughter had gone out of his eyes now. They had hardened to pinpoints. This time it was no amateur horseplay. He was fighting for his life. No need to tell Clay Landay that the New York gangster meant to leave him as good as dead.

The men rushed him. He fought them back with hard blows. Clay Jerry bowed like a wild bull. Clay caught him off his balance, using a short arm jolt which had back of it all that twenty-three years of clean outdoor Arizona combat. The two men grappled on the pavement hard.

He got up furious and charged again. The Arizona boy with the other man, tried to sidestep. In that instant of time before his knees bent to sag beneath him his brain flashed the news that Durand had struck him on the chin with brass knuckles. He was dazed and went down, still alive to what he was doing, but unable to move in his own defense. Weakly he tried to protect his face and side with his arms. Then he floated helplessly in space and vanished into unconsciousness.

Billy Whiskers

Just as Mr. Coon fell to the ground two shots rang out on the still air, and at the same time both Tom and Harry rushed forward to make sure that the cool cool cool yet get away. He was dead. There would be no doubt of that, but no mark of a bullet was found upon him. At the unexpected sight of the monkeys, his aid and most dreaded enemies, he had perished of heart failure.

While the boys were wondering how it was that the coon had died while bullets from neither of their guns had touched him, the other two, in a moment of confusion and utter astonishment, Billy Whiskers appeared before them, coming from the other side of the great chestnut tree. On the part of each there was every indication of joy at the unexpected result.

In the meantime the monkeys had crept down from their lofty perches and, according to their custom, silently formed a circle about their leader and his friends. When the boys saw them they thought that wonders would never cease.

It would be too much to say that they were not a little frightened at first, but as soon as they saw that Billy Whiskers took it as a matter of course that the monkeys were his friends, they invited them all to come with Billy to the house, assuring them of a cordial welcome.

On the way, Colonel MacLeod told Billy that the wicked coon had doubtless died of heart disease.

The other policeman, a sergeant, by this time the voices had localized themselves in persons—laughed with reluctant admiration.

"He's got seven lives like a cat. Take a look at the sea lion, Tim. 'Tis kindling the lad has made of the place. The man that runs the dump put up a good show, but I told him and the nuts that crowded round 'spunkin' for an arrest that if they hollowed the police would close the place and put the man in a cage for disorderly conduct. They melted away, believe me. He added, with an access of interest, 'Yuh've heard the boys tell the story of the rube that tried to sue the Sweetie for a divorce. Well, I've heard him and a lawyer. This is the same lad, I'm thinking.'

The other nodded. He was bending over Clay and sprinkling water on his face. 'Well, I've heard him and a lawyer. This is the same lad, I'm thinking.'

GOOD TALKERS ALWAYS CHOOSE DESCRIPTIVE VERBS, SAYS TEACHER.

(A "Study" Article)
Whenever Mr. Sanders tells of an experience he expresses his thoughts in such a way that his listener gets a vivid picture of just what took place. "How does he do it?" inquired Tom of his English teacher.

"I have never met your friend, Mr. Sanders," answered the English teacher, "so I can't say for sure, but I believe his choice of words has a lot to do with it—especially his verbs."

"His verbs?" repeated Tom, somewhat puzzled.

"Yes, his verbs; verbs you know are one of the most important parts of speech. Now, perhaps you can recall someone you know who tells a really interesting story in a most commonplace way. Listen closely next time you hear him talk and see if his choice of verbs isn't poorer than Mrs. Sanders'."

"What's one way of training yourself to choose better verbs?" asked Tom.

"One of the simplest I know of is the little experiment in verb substitution we used to practice when I was in college."

"You take some simple, plain statement of fact as 'The villain put the knife on the table.' This sentence, you see, gives you no vivid picture of the action. But by substituting some very 'thrill' or 'dropped' you draw a vivid picture of the villain angrily throwing the knife suddenly dropping it in a surprised manner."

"The verb you use may give you a clear idea of how the action was performed, or it may not. Another example is the sentence, 'I walked out of the room.' 'Walked' is a common verb and expressed no particular kind of action, but if I say 'I dashed out of the room'—the picture is clear."

"When you read your next book you will notice the author does just what we've been talking about—he uses descriptive verbs to make his story more vivid. And that is why Mr. Sanders is such an entertaining talker."

CHAPTER XXIV PETE'S EVIDENCE

First the lie—then the proof of the lie!

It sat there too frightened to think clearly. What was to happen? I had always been taught to believe that a lie under any circumstances was an unpardonable wrong, and here I was listening to the proof of untruthfulness from the man who wanted to marry my niece—to marry the most precious member of my family.

After all, the fact that he had not told us of his debts did not matter so much—that was forgivable. But who, in this unsympathetic crowd of men, would overlook the lie about meeting Pete the street?

So easy to say that if this one statement was wrong, all the evidence was false. And then what?

I looked over at Bud, whose head tilted towards me. I fancied he had that curious hard expression. But I could not tell, for the room was brightly lit at one end only, and there were too many shadows.

"Yes, sir," Bud's voice shook a trifle. He knew now what he had said.

"You did see him on the street?"

"Yes, sir." The boy's voice was weak now. Bud was thoroughly frightened.

"You denied that a little while ago."

"Why?"

"I didn't want to drag Pete in."

"You consider him a friend?"

There was an impatient movement from the man at the large desk—the gray haired man in the uniform with the braid, whom I look to be a judge. Evidently he was not getting through the proceedings as fast as possible—and who could blame him, for it was Christmas night?—and was not going to tolerate any unnecessary nonsense.

That at least is in my favor. The lawyer broke his sentence in the middle, turned to the judge and remarked:

"So you see, this young man's evidence is not always reliable. That is all for the time."

A uniformed man came up to Bud and motioned him to get down. I felt sure of relief to go over me. For the moment, at least, Bud was out of this torture.

He came down, and sat in one of the chairs, a little distance from me. He turned to look at Francis—but Francis kept his back to him. And that frightened me thoroughly.

VEERY.
Size—Fully two inches shorter than the robin.
Plumage—General effect is uniform above with white below. Only few black markings just below throat. Upperparts, wings and tail, nearly uniform cinnamon brown (not so bright as Wood Thrush). Center of throat and breast, cream-colored. Sides of throat and breast, brown. Back, belly and sides, white.

Range—Breeds from Michigan and lower Canada, south to Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, New Jersey and somewhat further south in Alabama. Winters in South America.

Just a voice in the woods.
That is what the Veery remains to catch a sight of the sweet voiced singer and you will be a merry chase through the tangled undergrowth, swamp bogs and almost impassable briars. Great patience may be rewarded with a brief glimpse of a little brown body scudding before you through the thicket, the slender grace of its curves proclaiming a member of the Thrush family.

During his migrations, he is not so shy, and is very apt to walk boldly out upon your front lawn and scratch around in the leaves in search of a late breakfast. This is before he abouts gone. I sleep fine and my food digests much better. Before I was unable to eat meat, rich or greasy foods. I am now on my second bottle of Kozak.

WIFE COMES TO FIREMAN'S AID

C. D. Johnston, 538 Cleveland St., Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., well known fireman of the local fire department, was so much pleased with the aid of Kozak, the Master Medicine, that he has written a letter to the editor of the Wisconsin Rapids Press, in which he says: "I am feeling 100% improved already. My nervousness is gone. I sleep fine and my food digests much better. Before I was unable to eat meat, rich or greasy foods. I am now on my second bottle of Kozak."

questionable or otherwise, and then spending in silly parties—but he was generous and kind-hearted and loyal. I never liked him before, but I found myself actually admiring him now.

Francis went towards the door, and motioned me to follow. Outside in the corridor stood Toots—silly little Toots with her cheap flannel and her huge fur muff and necktie. Her eyes got from crying. I turned from Francis and went over to her.

What Shall I Do?

Answered by VIRGINIA PAGE

The Hotel Bugaboo

"Dear Miss Page: A bunch of us are going to the city for a day soon and will go to the hotel. I was there not long ago and I'm troubled about many things—the others are all used to it and I would hate to make a blunder. I'm too proud to ask anyone else yet—I won't even let my chum know I'm so 'green.' Now will you tell me (1) What are the smaller bank books, so the cashier or the bank book, what I'm supposed to do? (2) Is it proper to take my hat in the dining room? (3) Is it proper to eat with a fork prongs which are not clean? (4) Is it proper to use a spoon? (5) Is it proper to use a knife and fork? (6) Is it proper to use a spoon? (7) Is it proper to use a knife and fork? (8) Is it proper to use a spoon? (9) Is it proper to use a knife and fork? (10) Is it proper to use a spoon?"

The big knife and fork are for the most course of your meal; the small, for the rest of the table or the salad. The small knife for the bread and butter spoon. Prongs up for the soup. It depends on what the waiter tells me. Is it eaten with spoon or fork? but the waiter will bring you the proper one when he serves the pudding.

As to the menu, which bothers so many, but must judge as best you can what kind of a meal your companions are apt to order, and then when the menu is presented to you, order whatever you wish from it. If you are in doubt about it, you may merely say that you wish the regular dinner, expressing your choice where a choice is offered—as it usually is in the meat and dessert courses, and in the soups. If the service is a la carte, you should order each separate dish you wish to have served you, all at one time (except for the dessert, which may be postponed if you like) and as clearly as possible so that the waiter will understand just what you want and how you want it.

If you are in doubt about any dish, don't hesitate to ask about it; the waiter expects to be asked. And if the "others are all used to" dining in public, watch them and you will learn the rules and ways very quickly. Unless you are living at the hotel, and have a table reserved for you, you should not remove your hat while dining in public.

Caring your hat, besides giving you a very artificial, hard look; trying to wear it with kid curls instead, or wearing it without curls. Thanks are always prompt for any courtesy or kindness, no matter what the circumstances.

THE JANESVILLE MARKET

Do You Want More Business From This Field---or Are You Satisfied?

The successful business man is never satisfied, he is continually increasing his efforts to develop his business and to expand the field from which he can draw that business.

Conditions in business right now demand clear thinking and close analysis, the seeking out of everything which will prove of advantage in producing business.

The most intensely interesting things are going on in business today. History is being made. We are right in the midst of it. But many of us are so busy speculating about what the immediate future may have in store for us that we lose sight of the really great transformations that are being wrought.

But there is a new influence hard at work however. In a little while the lull will be over and then we are going to enter upon the biggest era in all the history of merchandising and advertising.

With a firm belief that conditions will improve rapidly in a short time, The Gazette is making preparations to cover not only a larger percentage of the splendid market outlined in the map above, but also additional points not shown on the map, by issuing an early mail edition to cover points not now covered the day of publication instead of the following day so that returns to advertisers will be larger and quicker. Some of the towns which are not shown on the map but which will be taken in under this progressive trade building program are Mineral Point, Shullsburg, Platteville, Darlington, Bellemont, Calamine, Gratiot, South Wayne.

In further anticipation of good times coming The Gazette is making preparations to add several thousand additional subscribers in the territory shown and listed above which is tributary to Janesville and which will produce highly desirable business for Janesville business men.

The Gazette believes that the big significant thought back of this development of the Janesville market will not escape the attention of any advertiser.

Anybody can prophesy. But it is only stating the composite viewpoint of leading business authorities to say that, sooner than we think, advertising appropriations will be measured not by "How little can it be done for?" but by "How much will it take to put the thing over?"
